Fracture patterns and strength of samples are considerably affected by the layer orientation.

The average BTS-value for the schistose sandstone for theta = 0° and 90° is 7.0 and 1.6 MPa, respectively. As the strength of layer boundaries in the schistose sandstone is very low, local fracturing in layer boundaries occurs frequently before the final failure.