

MEMS devices in medical ultrasound

Helge Grinde, GE Vingmed Ultrasound

Medical ultrasound devices have traditionally used piezo-electric transducers to convert an electrical signal to sound waves. There is, however, a huge interest in the industry and academia to utilize MEMS devices for this. The lecture will aim at the opportunities such devices can offer, but also look at the challenges associated with this approach.