

Communicating populism

Comparing interactions between politicians, media, and citizens across Europe

Carsten Reinemann, James Stanyer, Toril Aalberg, Frank Esser, & Claes de Vreese (Eds.)

Table of Contents

1. Introduction: Comparing Populist Political Communication

Carsten Reinemann (U of Munich), James Stanyer (Loughborough U), Frank Esser (U of Zurich), Toril Aalberg (NTNU), Claes de Vreese (U of Amsterdam)

Part I: Populist political communication from the actors' perspective

2. Conceptualizing and investigating the perspective of politicians and journalists

Susana Salgado (U of Lisbon) and James Stanyer (Loughborough U)

3. Populist political communication from the perspective of politicians

Susana Salgado (U of Lisbon) et al.

4. Populist political communication from the perspective of journalists

James Stanyer (Loughborough U) et al.

Part II: Populist political communication and the media

5. Conceptualizing and investigating the role of the media

Sina Blassnig (U of Zurich) et al.

6. Factors encouraging populism in the media

Peter Maurer (NTNU) et al.

7. Populism in the media across time

Agnieszka Stepinska (U of Poznan) et al.

Part III: Populist political communication and citizens

8. The Persuasiveness of Populist Communication: Theoretical Explanations, Psychological Mechanisms and Empirical Implications

Michael Hameleers (U of Amsterdam) et al.

9. The perception of populist communication and its effects on issue agreement and blame attributions

Linda Bos (U of Amsterdam) et al.

10. The effects of populist communication on emotions, stereotypes and attitudes

Ioannis Andreadis (U of Thessaloniki) et al.

Part IV: Populist political communication as a challenge to democracy

11. Dealing with populist political communication. Conclusions and advice to politicians, media and citizens

Claes de Vreese (U of Amsterdam), James Stanyer (Loughborough U), Carsten Reinemann (U of Munich), Frank Esser (U of Zurich), Toril Aalberg (NTNU)